

‘I used to pull myself up the stairs with my arms. But the pain in my hands made that harder.’

than eight countries and designed and made in Britain, the S2 and S3 models were engineered to make homelifts simple to install, easy to use, and convenient to live with. Installation typically takes just one to two days with no major structural or electrical work required.

The S2 is ideal for couples or individuals seeking a compact yet spacious option that is practical. The S3 however, can accommodate up to three people or a wheelchair user. Both models feature warm ambient lighting, whisper-quiet drive systems, and an intuitive, secure control interface.

But beyond the specs, it’s the peace of mind that really counts. ‘I used to pull myself up the stairs with my arms. But the pain in my hands made that harder. You don’t realise how much strain you’re under until you don’t have to do it anymore. Now I don’t have to worry about falling or hurting myself. It’s a big relief, not just for us, but for our family too,’ says Ros. ‘We’ve used lifts before, but this is different,’ Brian adds. ‘This ride is so smooth I could drink a cup of tea on it without spilling a drop. It doesn’t shake or clunk like others. It’s light, open, and airy.’

A lifestyle choice

For Ros and Brian, choosing to stay in their multi-story home wasn’t just practical, it was a lifestyle decision. ‘We lived in a bungalow before, and it just didn’t fit us,’ they explain. ‘We love this house, the views, the light. We wanted to stay where we are, and Uplifts made that possible.’

From their initial inquiry to final installation, their experience with Stannah and Dolphin Stair Lifts South West was positive. ‘It was personable, professional, and very smooth,’ they say.

A milestone for Stannah

Today Uplifts by Stannah continues to expand internationally, but this first UK distributor installation marks a significant milestone, not just for the company but for the people it serves.

Led by the sixth generation of the Stannah family, under Sam Stannah, the company remains dedicated to its founding mission since 1867: to change people’s lives by helping them move safely, easily, and with dignity.
